

The role of a medical nurse in the society is to promote health, prevent illness, care for patients and help them restore their health, and if that is impossible – help them to learn to live with chronic illnesses or to part from life in physical and spiritual peace. A medical nurse, which has acquired higher education, is primarily the bringer of change in her environment – be it at her teaching or management position at the institution, which affects patient care or research. The Nursing programme at RSU prepares nurses of today for the world of tomorrow, with strong foundation in science, humanities and nursing, using problem based learning methods.
